Regroup Mass Notification Partners with CGPGMG for Active Shooter Response

The alliance will now incorporate Regroup's communication solution with CGPGMG's methods of ensuring people's safety when a hostile event transpires.

Testimonials

 A grid of nine video thumbnails arranged in a 3x3 layout. The top row contains three thumbnails: a man in a white shirt, a woman in a light blue top, and a man in a white shirt with glasses. The middle row contains a woman in a purple jacket, a central thumbnail with the Regroup logo and the text "What our clients say..." and a play button icon, and a man in a striped shirt. The bottom row contains a man in a white shirt and tie, a man in a blue shirt, and a man in a light green shirt. In the top right corner of the grid, there are icons for a clock and a share button.

Regroup Mass Notification, an emergency and mass communication technology company, announced on Wednesday the creation of a strategic alliance with CGPGMG, LLC, active shooter and domestic terrorism prevention experts.

The new partnership will cover both aspects of successfully responding to a crisis: notifying the public about the situation, and ensuring the right steps are taken to guarantee people's safety.

According to Regroup (<http://www.regroup.com/welcome/>), combining CGPGMG's critical response expertise with Regroup's communication platform will allow mutual clients to be better prepared to react amid an active shooter and effectively utilize mass communication technology during the event. Disseminating crucial information and instructions in a timely and reliable manner will ensure the right procedures are followed and lives are saved, the company says.

"The best outcome of any active shooter event is that it ends without any casualties," says Chris Grollnek, co-founder and CEO of CGPGMG. "We know that the average active shooter event ends in seven minutes, while it takes police an average of 14-17 minutes to arrive on the scene. It is therefore critical that institutions take the lead in communicating with employees and other key constituents, and provide them with rapid notification of the event, as well as actionable instructions for staying out of harm's way.

"By partnering with Regroup, we've found a communication solution that when combined with our training, we feel will save lives."

Joe DiPasquale, CEO of Regroup, said the company is very pleased to be partnering with CGPGMG and called Grollnek "one of the most well-respected and sought-after experts in the United States" in active shooter prevention training.

“Our clients often look to us as a trusted advisor when it comes to recommending solutions. When our mutual clients add Chris’ training with our mass notification platform, we feel they are putting effective measures in place that will guarantee the best possible outcome should an active shooter strike at their workplace.”
